Kevin

I appreciate that BACS wish to provide each child's parents with an individualised education plan for when their child leaves BAC. I am concerned that the meeting next Tuesday to facilitate this may be an inappropriate forum.

We know that some parents will be highly stressed, some children will be present and may become more distressed than they currently are, regarding their future. Justine felt that the presence of medical staff would intensify such angst amongst families. We have a collective responsibility to reduce risk of harm within this group and to provide sensitive, appropriate support to transition young people out from BAC.

My recommendation is that teaching staff have individually timed sessions with families rather than bringing them together as a group.

If you do proceed with this meeting I recommend that the NUM be advised as nursing support may be required for some young people .
